About Mac Prichard and Mac's List	20

All of us will go through many job searches throughout our careers. As the economy changes and our careers become more fluid, some of us may even switch jobs several dozen times.

Here's the irony: while looking for work is a near-universal experience, few people are formally learn how to conduct a job search. We train high school and college students in the technical skills they need for a vocation, but fail to teach them the nuts and bolts of how to land the jobs they want. As a result, most people struggle through job searches, relying on trial, error, and luck to reach professional goals.

There's a huge marketplace of products and services that aims to remedy this situation: career coaches, resume writers, employment agencies, and more books than you could read in a lifetime. Podcasts, however, provide a particularly powerful tool for teaching job search skills. Podcasting is an intimate medium; in the best shows, host and audience form a close relationship not found in in any other media. This intimacy lends itself to honest and empathetic conversations about the common human experience of looking for work.

I'm passionate about helping people find jobs that they love. That's why I started my own podcast, Find Your Dream Job, in 2015. It's also why I've put together this list of the top job search podcasts. I want this to be a learning resource for job seekers around the country and around the world.

All the shows featured in this list focus on how to find work and move ahead in your career. They address the core challenges that people face in a job search: how to find focus, how to craft a professional brand, how to connect with employers, and how to manage your career. These are also active shows with new episodes released on a regular basis in 2017.

I have listened to multiple episodes of each podcast in this list. I've also had the pleasure to connect with many of the hosts and can vouch for the quality and integrity of each production. If you're a job seeker, you'll find value and insight from any show on this list.

Of course, I may have missed an eligible job search podcast. If so, this was by oversight, not intention. There are only so many hours one can listen to podcasts each day! If you know of a great show I should include in the 2018 edition of this list, please share it with me at mac@macslist.org.

Thank you and happy listening!
